

Information about Trustees for re-election

Four trustees are up for re-election this year. The information below explains why they would like you to vote for them.

Nailia Jiminez

Nailia holds two diplomas in accountancy, including one from the UK. She used to work in Russia as an accountant, and has vast and varied financial experience. She enjoys this work very much and uses her skills to check the IB accounts. She is committed to giving her best as an Inclusion Barnet trustee, bringing her experience to bear to support the board.

Paul Hawkins

Paul previously worked as the Advice and Advocacy Manager for Barnet Centre for Independent Living but now works for Attitude is Everything, a charity that improves access to live music for Deaf and disabled people. He is additionally on the trustee board for Inclusion London. In his three years as an Inclusion Barnet trustee, he has offered advice, support and practical input into strategy, including helping to devise and develop our Touchpoint service. He is an experienced Disability Equality Trainer with a good understanding of equalities laws and the Social Model of Disability and feels he has a lot of advice and expertise to input into the board.

Geraldine Yenwo

Geraldine studied law, specialising in English private law, and subsequently a Post Graduate Certificate in Business Administration at Heriot Wyatt University. She is the co-founder of CAME Women and Girls Development organisation, which campaigns against gender-based violence and a member of the Commonwealth Country League Education Fund for Girls. She brings legal, business and charity experience to the board.

Sunethra Goonewardene

Sunethra is a teacher and the Chair of Barnet Borough Sight Impaired forum. She holds an MPhil from Brunel University where her topic of study was 'The Demand and Availability of Counselling for People with a Visual Impairment.' She is passionate about representing the needs and views of people with a visual impairment on the Inclusion Barnet board.
